IN MOURNING.—The Vicksburg Times, of the 7th instant, comes out in a suit of typographical mourning "for the death of Personal Rights and the Liberty of the Press." General McCordie, the editor, gives an account of his re-arrangement of the previous day by a special order from General Ord. He was required to give bond and security to "keep the peace" and "not to write anything libellous" for twelve months, which, he says, he did, rather than undergo a new experience of the hospitalities of Gen. Ord's hotel.

In concluding his card, General McCordie says: "I do not regard Gen. Ord as the Emperor of this country, and as I believe that President Johnson and Gen. U. S. Grant are his official superiors, I shall apply to them for relief and redress. If they cannot, or will not, strike from my limbs the fetters which have been placed upon them by the commander of this military district—if they cannot or will not, remove the shackles which he has imposed on the Times, then the liberty of the press, the most cherished right of a free people, must be classed with those things which perished in the using."

A SCENE IN THE VIRGINIA RECONSTRUCTION CONVENTION.—The Convention, so-called, met at the usual hour, the president in the chair. After prayer by the chaplain, all the brethren read the New Nation. The only noticeable feature of the day's proceedings was the discussion of the resolution of Mr. Thomas, offered on Monday, that the convention take a recess, when it shall adjourn on the 23d of December until the 6th of January. When it was called up every colored brother's face beamed with smiles as visions of "possum, pumpkin pie and persimmon beer flitted through his delighted imagination. In fact they all seemed ready to sing in their ecstasy. But then the cruel Clements of Portsmouth moved that during the recess no member shall receive pay, and what was worse the proposition was received. Dr. Bayne's lip dropped at once, Brother Hodges' specs slipped down his nose like a barometer before a storm, and others looked as sorrowful as they did when they first heard the election returns from Pennsylvania and Ohio. The consequence was that the resolution which promised to go through by an overwhelming vote was discussed until the hour of adjournment and laid over until to-morrow, when it will be again ventilated.

DEATH OF A WEALTHY COLORED MAN.—We see it stated that James Roper, the largest land-holder and the wealthiest man in Jefferson county, Va., is dead. Roper was a colored man, the natural son of an eccentric Englishman, who bequeathed the most of his property to the recently deceased, who added greatly to his paternal estate. Roper had a great facility for acquiring property and a mania for adding to his large landed estate. Every year or two he would purchase a farm, for which we have known him to pay as much as $110 per acre, when dollars were dollars. Roper was an intemperate man, yet, such was his natural shrewdness that nobody could take advantage of him in a trade, even when he was drunk. He was a quiet, inoffensive man, and as generally esteemed as a man of his habits could expect to be. He never voted, served on juries, or attempted to exercise rights denied by the laws, yet he was fully protected in his rights of person and property as any man in Virginia, and has, doubtless, left a larger and more valuable landed estate than any man now living in this State can boast.—Lynchburg Virginian.

PETRIFIED BODY.—An Albany paper says: "A woman, wife of a blacksmith, who formerly lived on Broadway, Albany, and who died some seventy years ago, was buried in one of the burial grounds on the hill. Last week some of her friends went there for the purpose of removing the body. On opening the grave, the coffin crumbled to pieces and the body lay there as whole as when deposited. The skin was black, and covered with a substance similar to moss, and presented a mouldy appearance. On feeling of the body it was found to be quite hard, and a further examination developed the fact that it was petrified. The black surface was scraped off the skin, when the latter presented a beautiful white appearance like that of cut marble. This is a truly remarkable circumstance, and elicits the wonder of all who have heard of it. Our informant says a coffin in which a child was inclosed, and which had been in the earth twenty years, appeared as well as the day it was put in the ground."

A CURIOUS STORY.—In a communication to the Zoological Society of Paris, M. Baraquin relates the following singular circumstances:

In eighteen hundred and thirty there was such an abundance of horses in the island of Marajo, belonging to the delta of the river Amazon, that a president of the province of Para made an agreement with a company to allow them to kill as many of these animals as they chose for the sake of the skins, which fetched fifteen francs each, while the live horse did not cost more than six francs. The horses were slaughtered with such carelessness that the carcasses, left unburied, caused dangerous infection, which could only be got rid of by setting fire to the whole island, which was thickly wooded. This measure caused the death of all the horses that had still survived, and since that time it has been impossible to reintroduce the breed on the island, all the horses brought thither soon falling victims to a paralysis of the hind legs!

Without making a useless harangue, I will say to my friends and the public that I am now prepared to supply all of their wants in the way of STOVES. I therefore invite my country friends to call and examine my stock of COOKING and HEATING STOVES before purchasing elsewhere, confident that they will not go away displeased. I would also enumerate amongst my stock a fine lot of TIN WARE, of my own manufacture, and made by very experienced workmen; also, TINNED SAFES, PRESERVING KETTLES, Fruit Cans, Fine Japanned and Plated Ware and Chamber Sets, to which I would call the attention of the public.
